

EVENT VENUE | RESTAURANT

Brand Reference

One place to look up the logo, the colours, the type and the photography, so everything The Acreage puts out looks like the same business, from the website to a Story posted at seven in the morning.

VERSION 2 · 6 OCTOBER 2026

WHAT'S NEW

Updated to Match the New Website

Version 1 (17 September) left the type and the green open. Both are settled now, and this version follows the website you approved.

The type is chosen

Libre Caslon italic for headings, Figtree for reading, Montserrat for the tagline. All three are free for commercial use, so there's nothing to license.

One green, three golds

The logo's green everywhere. The gold now comes in three strengths, each for a different job.

The A has a role

The gold A sits above every section heading, and on its own it's the profile picture.

Light leads

Warm white grounds, green for headings and buttons, gold used with restraint. No heavy green panels.

Social templates

Four post designs, drawn to Instagram size in the new type, replacing the A4-shaped originals.

The facts

Hours, capacities and contact details now match the website.

THE LOGO

Six Marks, Each With a Place

The stacked logo is the main one. The A on its own does the small jobs: profile pictures, the top of a section, the corner of a post.

Stacked, gold

The primary logo, on warm white or a quiet photograph.

Stacked, green

Documents, menus and anything printed on white.

Stacked, white

The website footer and dark photographs.

THE ACREAGE

Horizontal

Email signatures, banners, anywhere wide and short.

The A, gold

Above section headings, in the corner of posts.

The A, white

On photographs and Reels, top corner only.

Profile picture

The gold A on warm white, for Instagram, Facebook, TikTok and WhatsApp.

Good & Proper

The catering partner. Beside the catering copy only, never next to The Acreage logo.

Clear space. Keep a margin all round equal to the height of the capital A in THE ACREAGE.

Smallest sizes. Stacked logo 150px wide on screen, horizontal 200px, the A 30px.

One mark per layout. If the name is already in the headline, the A goes small in a corner rather than the full logo.

Never stretch it, recolour it, add a shadow, or retype the name in another font.

COLOUR

Light First, Green for the Words

Your brand foundation asks for light, sun-drenched and understated, and warns against looking like a golf club. So warm white does most of the work, green carries the headings and the buttons, and gold is used sparingly.

Roughly how much of a page or a post each colour should cover.

Estate Green

#0B4337

Headings, buttons and the logo. Settled: the templates' #014236 is retired.

Warm White

#FCFBF7

The ground for almost everything.

Linen

#F5F2EA

A second ground, to separate one section from the next.

Charcoal

#44443E

Body text. Softer than black.

Wheat Gold

#D4A878

The gold in the logo files. Logo only.

Deep Gold

#B08A4F

The A, fine rules and large prices on posts.

Label Gold

#7E5F22

Small gold capitals on light grounds, where the paler golds can't be read.

Button Gold

#C3AD84

Lettering on green buttons, and gold on green generally.

COMBINATION	CONTRAST	USE IT FOR
Estate Green on Warm White	10.8 : 1	Every heading, on the site and on posts.
White on Estate Green	11.2 : 1	The footer and text on green.
Button Gold on Estate Green	5.1 : 1	Button lettering. The signature pairing, in small doses.
Label Gold on Warm White	5.7 : 1	Small capital labels above headings.
Deep Gold on Warm White	3.1 : 1	Large type only, such as a price on a post. Never small text.
Wheat Gold on Warm White	2.1 : 1	Decoration only. This is why the logo gold is never used for words.

Ordinary text needs at least 4.5 to 1 to stay readable; large type needs 3 to 1.

TYPOGRAPHY

Three Typefaces, Each With One Job

The same three faces as the website. All are Google Fonts under the Open Font License, so they're free for the website, social posts, menus and print.

Come for Breakfast, Stay for Lunch.

Libre Caslon Text, italic

Headings. Title case, so every word starts with a capital except small ones like and, for, to and the. Always Estate Green.

EVENT VENUE | RESTAURANT

Montserrat, regular, very wide spacing

The tagline under the A, and the small line at the foot of a post. Capitals, spaced at about a third of the letter height.

THE RESTAURANT

Montserrat, medium capitals

The small gold label above a heading. Label Gold on light grounds.

Life moves a little slower here. Come early for coffee, when the mist is still lingering over the lawns, and stay for breakfast on the terrace.

Figtree Light

Everything people read: paragraphs, menus, captions on posts. Charcoal, with generous line spacing and short lines.

Canyon and Pinklatte

The two script fonts in the brand folder are free demo versions marked "personal use only", and Pinklatte has been used on at least one social post. Please stop using both on anything public unless you buy the commercial licence. Libre Caslon italic now gives the same graceful feel without the risk.

SMALL PARTS

The Details That Repeat

BOOK A TABLE

Buttons are Estate Green with Button Gold lettering, rounded ends, spaced capitals. One style everywhere.

A Day You'll Remember.

Every section opens the same way: the gold A, a gold label, then the green heading.

Tuesday to Sunday & public holidays

Breakfast from 7am

Kitchen until 5pm

Closed Mondays

BREAKFAST

Feta, balsamic, rocket

R78

EVENT VENUE | RESTAURANT

YOU'RE INVITED

Open Day

Thursday 15 October

Type card

Lists: menus, capacities, what's included. Warm white, never green.

Invitation

Events and occasions, with a fine double gold rule.

One idea per post. A dish and a price, or a space and a headcount.

Photographs run to the edge or sit in a clean frame on warm white. No borders, stickers or filters.

On Stories and Reels, keep words out of the top 250 and bottom 340 pixels, where Instagram puts its buttons.

The A goes in a corner, gold on light posts and white on photographs. Never the full logo on a post.

See every post in place at the social posts page.

PHOTOGRAPHY

Natural Light, Real Moments

Yes

Daylight and the last hour of it: the lawns, the water, the drive in.

People mid-moment: eating, pouring, laughing, walking in.

Food on the table with a hand in the frame.

Space around the subject, so words have somewhere to sit.

Upright framing, so it works as a post and as a Story.

No

Stock photographs.

Heavy filters, cold edits or flash.

Bins, cables, stacked chairs, power lines.

Anything saved from someone else's account.

Horses or racing as the subject. The estate, not the track.

Three frames from your brand shoot that set the standard.

WORDS

How The Acreage Sounds

THE VOICE

Warm, refined and understated. Short sentences.

Say the thing plainly: the dish, the price, the day, the time.

No exclamation marks, and go easy on emoji.

Always a next step: a WhatsApp number or a link.

Avoid stunning, nestled and hidden gem.

THE FACTS

Tuesday to Sunday & public holidays, breakfast from 7am, kitchen until 5pm, closed Mondays.

Up to 150 in the restaurant, 5,000 across the estate.

Three Things to Finish

Editable template files. Versions of the four post designs your team can edit themselves, once we know which tool they use.

The Good & Proper logo as a vector (SVG, AI or PDF), so it stays sharp in print.

The script fonts. A decision on Canyon and Pinklatte for posts already published.
