

Events and everyday offers, for approval

This replaces the weekly offer sheet I sent you on 17 September. Your July to September till report changed my mind about what will actually work here, so I have rebuilt it. Nothing goes out until you have set the prices and said yes.

FOR APPROVAL · 21 SEPTEMBER 2026

WHY THIS VERSION IS DIFFERENT

Your own trading figures pointed somewhere else.

The first sheet gave every day of the week a discount. Then your till report arrived, and it made a much stronger case for programmed events than for everyday price cuts. Four numbers did most of the persuading.

46%

of restaurant revenue comes from Saturdays alone

R38,547

taken on the house music Saturday, against about R10,750 on a normal one

R2,160

total trade after 16:00 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays across eleven weeks

4.3%

of sales are wine and bubbly, on a list that is almost entirely one estate

One programmed night earned more than three ordinary midweek days put together. That is the lever, and it is already proven in your own numbers.

There is a second reason for the change. Your brand foundation document says promotions should attract people through the quality of the experience rather than through price, and that Acreage should never become known for cheap drinks. I agree, and the old sheet was heading that way. Nothing on this page is a discount. Every item is either an occasion people buy into, or something new to sell.

The events calendar

Four events, running to a rhythm people can learn. Two land on Sunday, which is currently your quietest good day and carries your highest average bill. One creates a Friday evening, which barely exists at the moment. One repeats what already worked.

WHEN	THE EVENT	WE SUGGEST	YOUR PRICE	RUN IT?
First Sunday From 11:00	The Champagne Brunch A brunch plate, two glasses of MCC and an acoustic set on the terrace. Booked in advance, two sittings if it fills. Sunday 11:00 to 13:00 is already your busiest window outside Saturday, and Sunday tables spend more than any other day. This raises what that table is worth rather than chasing a new one.	R395 per person	-----	Yes / No
Third Sunday 12:30	The Long Table One long shared table under the trees. Three courses brought to the middle, a glass on arrival, and no rush to leave. This is the clearest expression of lingering you can actually sell, and it suits a guest who is already spending well on a Sunday.	R425 per person	-----	Yes / No
Last Friday 17:00 to 21:00	Sunset Sessions Live acoustic on the lawn, no charge to come. The thing we sell is a board for two to share while the sun goes down. Friday evenings currently take about R320 in total across the whole night. There is nothing to protect here, so it is the safest place to try something new.	Free entry Sunset board R345 for two	-----	Yes / No
Quarterly Saturday evening	House at The Acreage The 12 September format, repeated on a schedule instead of	Confirm tell me the ticket you charged	-----	Yes / No

	once. Ticketed, capped, and announced six weeks out. This is the only item on the page that is not a prediction. It already happened and it took R38,547 in a day.
One rule for all four. They go in the calendar for the next six months at once and get announced together. An event announced three weeks out fills. An event announced three days out does not, and a half empty event is worse for the brand than no event.

PART TWO

Three things to put on the menu

These are not offers and they cost nothing to run. They are gaps in what you currently sell, and each one is money walking past a table you already have.

ADD	WHY	WE SUGGEST	YOUR PRICE	DO IT?
A dessert menu Six items	You sold 821 cappuccinos and 29 desserts. The whole dessert menu is a cake slice and a brownie. Coffee is the single biggest seller in the business and almost nothing is going out alongside it. Six desserts, listed properly, offered at the table.	R75 to R95 each	-----	Yes / No
Wine by the glass Three or four estates	Red wine took R1,190 in eleven weeks. That is about fifteen rand a day, and the list is almost entirely one estate. Your brand plan wants wine culture, tastings and Champagne brunches. None of that can be sold off the current list, so this has to come first.	R55 to R95 a glass, plus MCC by the glass	-----	Yes / No
The cheese board To share	The thing that makes people stay another hour. Your own brand document describes exactly this: chairs looking over the track, with wine, olives and a cheese board. It is the best lingering product you can sell and it is not on the menu.	R285 for two to share	-----	Yes / No

Three quiet windows worth naming

Only three, and each one points at an hour that is genuinely empty rather than one that is already working. None of them is priced below the parts.

WHEN	THE OFFER	WE SUGGEST	YOUR PRICE	RUN IT?
Monday Closed to the public	The Boardroom A private half day for a company of ten to thirty: the space to themselves, breakfast, a working lunch and bottomless coffee. Sold, never posted. Monday takes almost nothing because you are closed, so anything booked here is new. Comparable venues nearby quote around R575 a head for a half day.	R450 per head, half day	-----	Yes / No
Wednesday 15:00 to 17:00	The Long Afternoon A dessert and either a coffee or a glass of wine, on the terrace. A named pairing at what the two cost anyway, not a saving. Wednesday is your weakest trading day and the middle of the afternoon is its weakest stretch.	R135	-----	Yes / No
Sunday 8:00 to 10:30	Breakfast on the Lawn Low tables and blankets on the grass, breakfast and bottomless filter coffee, before the lunch crowd arrives. Sunday mornings are quiet while Sunday lunch is full, so the demand is already on the property, just two hours later.	R145	-----	Yes / No

WHAT I DROPPED, AND WHY

Two of the old offers should not run.

Tuesday breakfast

The old sheet had a discounted Farmhouse Breakfast on a Tuesday morning. Your figures show Tuesday between 8:00 and 10:00 is one of your strongest midweek windows already. Discounting it would cost you money on tables you are getting anyway.

Thursday evening ribs

Thursday night is empty, but so is every midweek night, and there is no evidence anyone wants to be here on a Thursday yet. Building a Friday evening first is the better bet, and if Sunset Sessions works we can look at Thursday afterwards.

Held, not cancelled.

WHAT THIS COULD BE WORTH

About R99,000 over ninety days, on careful assumptions.

I want to be straight with you about this number, because the last sheet carried a bigger one and I no longer stand behind it. Before your till report I had no baseline, so I was guessing. Now I have one.

- The events carry most of it, roughly R69,000. That assumes the new events draw about half of what your house music night drew, which is deliberately cautious, plus one repeat of that night at what it actually took.
- The three quiet windows add roughly R30,000, most of it from Monday, because a closed day currently earns nothing at all.
- The menu additions are not in that total. Dessert, wine and the cheese board raise what an existing table spends rather than bringing a new one, and I would rather show you real attach rates after a month than guess at them now.

The one number here that is not an assumption is R38,547. That is what a single programmed Saturday actually took, against about R10,750 on an ordinary one. Everything else on this page is an estimate and should be treated as one.

OVER TO YOU

What I need back.

- ☐ A price, or a yes or no, against each line above. Where my price is wrong, write yours in. You know what these plates cost better than I do.
- ☐ The ticket price for the house music night, and roughly how many people came, so the quarterly version is planned off a real number.
- ☐ A decision on the wine list. Three or four estates instead of one, and MCC available by the glass. Almost everything your brand plan wants to do with wine depends on this.
- ☐ Six dates for the next six months, checked against your function calendar, so the whole calendar can be announced at once.
- ☐ A button on the till for each offer that goes live, so that in a month we are reading what actually happened instead of estimating it again.

Nothing here goes near your social media until it comes back from you with prices on it.
