What we need photographed and filmed, and the shapes it has to work in.

Saturday 19 Sep

Weather permitting
Randjesfontein, Midrand

WHY THIS SHOOT

We have the place. We need it in use.

The Acreage already has beautiful professional photographs of the venue, the plated food and the drinks, almost all of them without people. What social media, advertising and the new website need now is the same setting with life in it: people at the tables, food arriving, light on the lawn. Everything from this day will be used on Facebook, Instagram, TikTok, in paid ads and on the website.

THE LOOK

Elegant, soft and natural.

Warm natural light, an airy feel, and people caught mid-moment rather than posed. The images below are from The Acreage's own library and show the light and mood to aim for.

Soft backlight, the lawn blurred behind.

Delicate detail, soft window light.

Long light across the grass.

A dressed table. Next time, with the guests at it.

Natural light

Candid

Florals and linen

Soft, warm tones

Space around the subject

Hands and movement

Heavy, dark edits

Stiff posed smiles

Flash

Cluttered backgrounds

THE SHOT LIST

Thirty frames.

The format column shows which shapes each shot has to work in. Shots marked "Also for ads" are the ones the advertising depends on, and "Video too" means ten seconds of that same scene filmed upright is worth as much as the still.

Shoot every frame upright as well as horizontal: vertical is what Stories, Reels, TikTok and most ads use, and a vertical frame can be cropped to a feed post, while a horizontal one cannot become a good Story. Five frames are children or dogs shot from a distance or from behind, so nobody is recognisable in them and they need no release.

01 Two people eating breakfast on the lawn, mid-conversation

Not looking at the camera. Plates visible but not the subject. The single most important frame on this list.

4:5 + 9:16

ALSO FOR ADS

02 Hands, coffee being poured, steam

Tight and close. Shoot it three or four ways.

9:16

VIDEO TOO

ALSO FOR ADS

03 A family of four at a table, children included

The kids' menu exists, and families are a main audience. There is no photograph yet that says children are welcome.

4:5

ALSO FOR ADS

04 A child with a milkshake or a dessert

The milkshakes and desserts are already photographed beautifully. The child is what is missing, and it is the frame that gets shared.

4:5 + 9:16

ALSO FOR ADS

05 A full breakfast plate being put down in front of someone

Over the shoulder, the server's hands in frame. Movement rather than a styled still.

VIDEO TOO

06 The menu being read at a table

Says breakfast is served all day without needing a caption.

4:5

07 A dog under a table, the owner's legs in frame

The one Bring the Dog photo that has to be your own, not saved from someone else.

4:5 + 9:16

ALSO FOR ADS

08 A dog on the lawn with the lake behind

Wide, with the estate doing the selling.

4:5

09 A water bowl being put down for a dog

A small detail that proves dogs are welcomed, not tolerated.

9:16

10 Children playing, shot wide from a distance

The jungle gym, the jumping castle, a game on the lawn. Far enough back that no child is recognisable, which means no permission is needed and it can run in an ad.

4:5 + 9:16

ALSO FOR ADS

11 Children from behind, running on the lawn

Backs to the camera, parents in the frame if possible. The school holiday audience is families, and this is the frame that says so.

12	A child and a dog together Two of the strongest things about the place in one picture. From behind or side on.	4:5 ALSO FOR ADS
13	A family table from behind, plates and the view in front of them Says come with the children without needing anyone's face or a release.	4:5 ALSO FOR ADS
14	Several dogs and their owners on the lawn More than one dog in frame reads as a habit rather than an exception. Owners' faces not needed.	4:5 + 9:16 VIDEO TOO
15	The kitchen mid-service, a chef working Faces. People behind the food.	4:5 + 9:16 VIDEO TOO ALSO FOR ADS
16	The pass, plates going out Movement and heat. Film it as well as photographing it.	9:16 VIDEO ALSO FOR ADS
17	Front of house greeting an arriving table The welcome, which is what your reviews talk about.	4:5 VIDEO TOO
18	A barista or bartender making something, hands and face Sells the bar hours after the kitchen closes.	9:16 VIDEO TOO
19	Jade and Andrew on the lawn, together One good frame of both owners, used sparingly.	4:5
20	A table of eight or ten, full, mid-meal Proves the restaurant takes a group. Function bookers look for exactly this.	4:5 VIDEO TOO ALSO FOR ADS
21	A dressed long table before guests arrive, then the same table full If a real function is on the day of the shoot, photograph that instead, with the client's permission.	4:5 + 16:9 ALSO FOR ADS
22	People on the lawn at golden hour, backlit, in silhouette Beautiful, and nobody is identifiable, which keeps permissions simple.	9:16 + 4:5 VIDEO TOO ALSO FOR ADS
23	Drinks on a table at sunset, people blurred behind Sells the occasion, not just the view.	4:5 VIDEO TOO
24	The braai or fire pit in use Needed for every function and year-end promotion.	9:16 VIDEO ALSO FOR ADS

Arrival: the gate, the drive, the first view of the estate
Answers what it is like to get there. Also the first two seconds of every Reel.

The restaurant full, wide from the entrance
One frame that answers "will it take our whole team?" Shoot it on the busiest part of the day, and pan it slowly on video.

The whole estate in one frame, from the ground
Buildings, lawns and trees together in late light. This becomes the website header and the Facebook Event cover, so leave room at the top for words.

- 28

A tray of drinks or platters carried across the lawn
Service in motion, shot from behind or side on. The most useful few seconds of video on the list.

A table detail set: linen, flowers, glassware, an open menu
No people. These become the backgrounds for offers, menus and invitations, so shoot them plain with space around the objects.

Afternoon on the deck: coffee, cake, someone reading
The quiet hours after lunch are the easiest trade to add, and there is nothing in the library that sells them.

The children's frames may want a second, shorter session. The school holiday runs from 24 September to 5 October, which is when families are actually on the lawns and when the play equipment is worth photographing. If Saturday is quiet on that front, we pick those five frames up during the holiday.

THE SHAPES

What each format actually looks like.

Every platform crops to its own shape. Below are the ones we use, drawn true to each other, each one filled with a photograph from The Acreage's existing library.

Square, 1:1

Carousel slides and ad carousels.

Portrait, 4:5

Every feed post and feed ad. The workhorse.

Vertical, 9:16

Stories, Reels, TikTok, and all video.

Landscape, 16:9

The website only.

Drawn at 14 percent of real size.

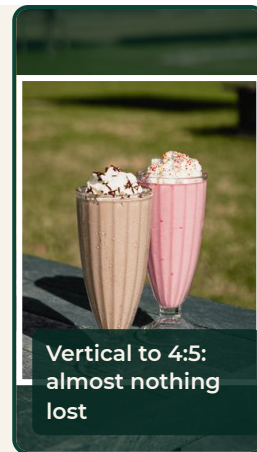

Event cover

The top of a Facebook Event page. Leave the middle clear.

Why we ask for everything upright

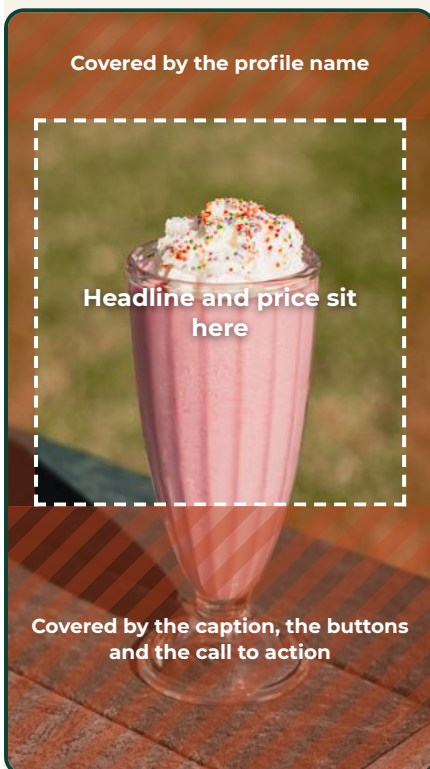

Landscape to vertical. The white box is all that survives in a Story, a Reel or a vertical ad. On a wide lawn shot that throws away exactly what made it worth taking.

Vertical to portrait or square. An upright frame trims neatly to 4:5 for the feed and 1:1 for a carousel, so one shot covers three places.

Where the words have to go

- On a vertical frame, the top 14 percent and bottom 35 percent are covered by the interface, and about 6 percent down each side.
- The photograph itself can fill the frame. It is the headline and the price that have to live inside the dashed area, which is why we ask for space around the subject.
- Shooting a little wider than feels right is the single most useful habit. A crop can always be tightened later; it cannot be loosened.

In short: upright, a little wider than tight, with quiet space near the top or the bottom of the frame. A vertical photograph can become any of the shapes above. A landscape one can never become a good Story.

THE TECHNICAL SIDE

Formats, video and delivery.

Photographs

- Both orientations for every key frame, with room around the subject so it can be cropped. The shapes are drawn above.
- Leave clear space at the top of some frames, for a headline or price.
- Full-resolution JPEG, colour-edited to the soft, natural look above, no watermark.

Video clips

- Filmed upright, 4K or 1080p at 25 or 30 frames a second, for every frame marked "Video too".
- Hold each shot for ten seconds and keep it steady.
- Sound on. Real sound from the day, no music added.
- Anything marked "Video too" in the list, plus a slow walk through the restaurant and one of the lapa.

Delivery

- Into The Acreage's shared Google Drive folder, never over WhatsApp, which shrinks the files.
- Twenty selects within 48 hours, so the best frames can go on the website and social media straight away.
- The full edited set within five working days, with the raw video clips.

Usage rights, in writing

- The Acreage may use every image and clip without time limit on social media, in paid advertising, on the website and in print.
- Agreed with the photographer before the day, with the rate.
- The photographer may use the work in their own portfolio.

PEOPLE

Guests who have said yes.

Real guests may not want to be photographed, and anyone who appears in an advert has to agree to it. The simplest route is to invite a few tables of friends, regulars or team families for the morning and for sunset, and to ask everyone recognisable to sign a short release. Silhouettes and shots from behind need no release.

Four tables to invite

- A couple, for breakfast on the lawn.
- A family with young children, happy for them to be photographed from behind or at a distance.
- Three or four friends, for brunch or sunset drinks.
- A guest with a well-behaved dog.

A release, in plain words

Suggested wording for a one-line sign-off sheet with name, signature and date:

"I agree that The Acreage may use photographs and video of me taken on 19 September 2026 on its website, social media and advertising."

BEFORE SATURDAY

The checklist for The Acreage.

- | | |
|---|---|
| ☐ Photographer booked, with the rate and usage rights confirmed in writing | ☐ Team in clean uniform, and the chef and bar staff happy to be photographed |
| ☐ This brief sent to the photographer | ☐ Lawn cut, and bins, cables and stacked furniture cleared from view |
| ☐ Four tables invited, and the release sheet printed | ☐ A shared Google Drive folder created for the files |
| ☐ Fresh flowers and linen napkins for the tables | ☐ One person named to look after the photographer on the day |
| ☐ The kitchen told which dishes to plate | ☐ Forecast checked on Thursday 17 September |
| ☐ The jumping castle or play equipment on site, if it is normally hired in | |

If the weather turns, overcast light is fine, even flattering, for the food, the people and the dogs, so most of the list can still be shot. The sunset and silhouette frames need a clear evening: Sunday 20 September or Saturday 26 September would both work for those.
